

#51 PROVIDE THAT THE TIME LIMITS FOR BRINGING TAX LITIGATION ARE SUBJECT TO THE JUDICIAL DOCTRINES OF FORFEITURE, WAIVER, ESTOPPEL AND EQUITABLE TOLLING

Present Law

Various provisions in the IRC authorize proceedings or suits against the government, provided such actions are brought timely. These actions are generally brought in the United States Tax Court, a United States District Court, or the United States Court of Federal Claims.¹⁶³

Equitable doctrines which, if available, might excuse an untimely filing include equitable tolling (applicable when it is unfair to hold a plaintiff to a statutory deadline because of an extraordinary event that impeded the plaintiff's compliance); equitable estoppel (applicable when it is unfair to allow the defendant to benefit from the statutory deadline because of something the defendant did to prevent a timely suit); forfeiture (applicable when the parties have acted as if the case need not operate under the statutory deadlines); and waiver (applicable when the parties have agreed explicitly that a case need not operate under legal deadlines).

United States Tax Court

For some types of tax controversies, the United States Tax Court is the only judicial forum in which taxpayers, by filing a petition within a specified period; may litigate their tax liability without first paying the tax asserted. Examples of these types of controversies include deficiency proceedings, collection due process (CDP) proceedings, and "stand-alone" innocent spouse cases (i.e., where innocent spouse relief is sought other than in response to a statutory notice of deficiency or as part of a CDP proceeding).

Other types of cases brought in the Tax Court include interest abatement cases, worker classification cases, and whistleblower claims.

IRC § 7442, which describes the jurisdiction of the Tax Court, does not specify that prescribed periods for petitioning the Tax Court are not subject to equitable doctrines.

The Tax Court has held that, in the absence of a timely filed petition, it does not have jurisdiction to re-determine deficiencies, hear appeals from IRS CDP proceedings, or consider stand-alone innocent spouse claims.

With respect to deficiency cases and stand-alone innocent spouse cases, several United States Courts of Appeals have agreed with the Tax Court that the time limits for filing a Tax Court petition are jurisdictional requirements that cannot be modified by applying equitable doctrines.

Other Federal Courts

In some cases, taxpayers have the right to obtain judicial review in federal courts other than the Tax Court if they sue within a specified period. For example, a refund suit can generally be brought in the United States District Courts or in the United States Court of Federal Claims within two years after the IRS denies the claim. There is a split between circuits regarding whether the statutory period for seeking refunds is subject to equitable doctrines.¹⁶⁴

Similarly, taxpayers may sue in a U.S. District Court to enjoin enforcement of a wrongful levy or sale, or to recover property (or proceeds from the sale of the property) if they do so within a specified period (generally, within two years of levy). Several federal courts have held that the applicable period is not subject to equitable tolling,¹⁶⁵ but at least one appellate court has held that it is.¹⁶⁶

Taxpayers may also bring suit, if they do so within the specified periods, to seek civil damages in a United States District Court or bankruptcy court with respect to unauthorized actions by the IRS. Courts have differed on whether equitable doctrines can toll the applicable period for bringing suit.¹⁶⁷

Reasons for Change

The sanction for failing to commence suit in the Tax Court or another federal court within the time limits prescribed by the IRC is severe: taxpayers lose their day in that court, which may be the only prepayment forum, or the only forum at all, with jurisdiction to hear their claim. Treating the IRC time limits for bringing suit as jurisdictional, and not subject to equitable doctrines, leads to unfair outcomes.

Unrepresented taxpayers, in particular, may be less likely to anticipate the severe consequences of filing a Tax Court petition even one day late, and most Tax Court petitioners do not have representation. The IRS itself occasionally provides inaccurate information regarding the filing deadline to a taxpayer, and taxpayers have been harmed by relying on that erroneous information.¹⁶⁸

The right to a fair and just tax system requires that equitable doctrines be available to taxpayers in the rare cases they would apply. Taxpayers would still be required to demonstrate that an equitable doctrine applies in their cases, and courts could still dismiss petitions or complaints as untimely.

Supp. 2d 1171, 1177 (D. Haw. 2000) (doctrine of equitable tolling is an extraordinary remedy that did not apply in this § 7433 action), Ramos v. U.S., 2002-2 U.S.T.C. (CCH) ¶50,767 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (denying motion to dismiss because doctrine of equitable tolling might apply to a § 7433 action), and Bennett v. U.S., 366 F. Supp. 2d 877, 879 (D. Neb. 2005) (whether equitable tolling applies to §§ 7432 and 7433 actions has not been definitively determined, but it is an extraordinary remedy and did not apply in this case).

¹⁶⁸ See, e.g., Naufflett v. Comm'r, 892 F.3d 649, 652-654 (4th Cir. 2018) (doctrine of equitable tolling did not apply to innocent spouse case despite reliance on erroneous IRS advice regarding the filing deadline); Rubel v. Comm'r, 856 F.3d 301, 306 (3d Cir. 2017) (same).

Recommendation

Enact a new section of the IRC, or amend IRC § 7442, to provide that the periods set forth in the IRC within which taxpayers may petition the Tax Court or file suit in other federal courts are not jurisdictional and are subject to the judicial doctrines of forfeiture, waiver, estoppel, and equitable tolling.¹⁶⁹

¹⁶⁹ If this change to the IRC were enacted, late-filed claims would no longer be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, which would mean that the taxpayer would have no right to pursue a refund suit. As a result, we are also recommending that IRC § 7459(d) be amended to make clear that a dismissal based on timeliness is not a decision on the merits.
