EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

On July 1, 2014, the IRS released Form 1023-EZ, Streamlined Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. The application allows certain organizations to attest that they meet requirements for exempt status and does not require any supporting documentation or substantiation of those attestations. TAS undertook a study to examine a representative sample of organizations in 20 states that make articles of incorporation viewable online at no cost whose Form 1023-EZ was approved by the IRS. The objective of the study is to ascertain the extent to which approved organizations actually satisfied the organizational test, a legal requirement for qualification as an Internal Revenue Code (IRC) § 501(c)(3) organization, and the extent to which approved organizations, whether they met the organizational test or not, were eligible to apply for exempt status using Form 1023-EZ. The study findings for the population studied are statistically valid at the 95 percent confidence level with a margin of error no greater than +/-5 percent.

The study found that for organizations in 20 states that make articles of incorporation viewable online at no cost:

- Thirty-seven percent do not meet the organizational test for qualification as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization;
- Thirty percent of these organizations' articles of incorporation do not have an acceptable purpose clause;
- Twenty-three percent of these organizations' articles of incorporation do not provide for distribution of assets upon dissolution as the law requires;
- It takes on average less than three minutes to review articles of incorporation and determine whether the organizational test is met and in over 90 percent of the cases, it took five minutes or less; and
- Only about half of the organizations maintain websites that could provide additional information.

Thus, the IRS approves a significant portion of Form 1023-EZ applications from organizations that do not meet the legal requirements for qualification as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations. To the extent these organizations receive amounts that should be treated as taxable receipts they are improperly subsidized by other taxpayers. Eight organizations in our sample filed Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return, for at least one tax period prior to obtaining recognition of exempt status, which raises the question of whether the organizations merely continued to operate a for-profit entity in the guise of an exempt organization. To the extent non-exempt organizations receive contributions deducted by the donor, tax dollars are inappropriately diverted. Moreover, the skeletal Form 1023-EZ, the brevity of the annual report required of these organizations, and the probability that the organizations will not have a website result in a disturbing lack of information about them, undermining the public's and the IRS's ability to effectively monitor this segment of the exempt organization population.

INTRODUCTION¹

Taxpayers seeking exempt status as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations must generally apply to the IRS to have their exempt status recognized.² Those excepted from the requirement to apply include organizations with gross receipts of normally not more than $5,000,³ but even these very small organizations must submit an application if they are seeking reinstatement of exempt status following automatic revocation.⁴ Some organizations, such as churches, request recognition of exempt status although they are not required to do so.⁵ From fiscal year (FY) 2010-2014, the annual number of applications for recognition of exempt status as an IRC § 501(c)(3) evaluated by the Exempt Organizations (EO) function of the Tax Exempt and Government Entities division (TE/GE) ranged from 45,000 to more than 100,000.⁶

Prior to July 1, 2014, organizations submitted their applications on Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, which is 12 pages long.⁷ Thereafter, many organizations submitted their application on the three-page Form 1023-EZ, Streamlined Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, which appears as Appendix B. Most organizations that applied for exempt status as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations in FY 2015 did so using Form 1023-EZ.⁸ Figure 1.1 shows the number of applications from organizations seeking IRC § 501(c)(3) status for which EO made determinations from FY 2010 to FY 2014, and the number and rate at which EO approved those applications.

4 IRC § 6033(j)(1) provides for automatic revocation of exempt status of organizations that fail to file a required return or notice for three consecutive years. IRC § 6033(j)(2) requires organizations whose exempt status was automatically revoked to apply for reinstatement “regardless of whether such organization was originally required to make such an application.”

Copying, assembling, and sending the form to the IRS takes on average 48 minutes.

Organizations Seeking IRC § 501(c)(3) Status FYs 2010-2014: Total Applications, Number Approved, and Approval Rates

TAS undertook a study of a representative sample of organizations in 20 states that make articles of incorporation viewable online at no cost whose Form 1023-EZ was approved by the IRS. The study was undertaken to determine the extent to which the approved organizations actually met the organizational test, a legal requirement for tax exempt status as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization, and the extent to which approved organizations (whether or not they met the organizational test) were actually eligible to apply using Form 1023-EZ. Our findings for the population studied are statistically valid at the 95 percent confidence level with a margin of error no greater than +/-5 percent.

BACKGROUND

Form 1023-EZ Drastically Reduced the Amount of Information Required to Apply for Exempt Status As an IRC § 501(c)(3) Organization

For more than 30 years prior to the introduction of Form 1023-EZ, taxpayers seeking exempt status as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations applied using Form 1023.¹⁰ The IRS estimates it takes more than nine hours on average to complete a full Form 1023, which is 12 pages long (not counting any required schedules or attachments).¹¹ Because the IRS does not need such extensive information to determine whether most small organizations are exempt, the National Taxpayer Advocate recommended that TE/GE

9 Table 24, Closures of Applications for Tax-Exempt Status, by Organization Type and Internal Revenue Code Section, IRS Data Books, 2010-2014. As the FY 2014 Data Book notes, the increase from FY 2013 to FY 2014 "is attributable to the introduction of a streamlined application process in FY 2014 for all determination applications and the implementation of the electronic Form 1023-EZ, a streamlined three-page version of the 26-page Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code."

10 See, e.g., Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Office of Management and Budget, Information Collection Request Ref. No. 198104-1545-056, approving a 1981 revision of the form.

11 Instructions to Form 1023, 24, estimating that on average it takes nine hours and 39 minutes to prepare the form, involves 89 hours 26 minutes of recordkeeping, and takes five hours 10 minutes to learn about the law or the form. Copying, assembling, and sending the form to the IRS takes on average 48 minutes.

adopt a less burdensome Form 1023-EZ.¹² As discussed below and elsewhere in this report, the IRS has now adopted a Form 1023-EZ that has gone too far in the opposite direction by “eliciting” only a series of checkmarks in boxes and the organization’s attestation, or affirmation, that it meets the legal requirements for exempt status.¹³

Eligibility to request exempt status using Form 1023-EZ requires, among other things, that the organization’s gross receipts have not exceeded $50,000 in any of the last three years and that its total assets do not exceed $250,000.¹⁴ Organizations applying for retroactive reinstatement of exempt status following automatic revocation may use Form 1023-EZ if, in addition to meeting the other eligibility requirements, they apply within 15 months from the date of the revocation.¹⁵ Applicants attest (by checking a box) that they have completed the Eligibility Worksheet contained in the instructions to Form 1023-EZ (the worksheet appears as Appendix C), and that they are eligible to apply for exemption using Form 1023-EZ.

Form 1023-EZ differs from Form 1023 in three crucial areas:

- Form 1023-EZ does not require the applicant to submit its organizing documents, such as articles of incorporation;
- Form 1023-EZ does not require the applicant to describe its activities; and
- Form 1023-EZ does not elicit information (beyond yes or no responses) that would signal a potential for inurement or private benefit.¹⁶

TE/GE analyzes, on an ongoing basis, a random sample of organizations that successfully applied for exempt status using Form 1023-EZ.¹⁷ The results of that analysis, discussed earlier in this report, did not reassure the National Taxpayer Advocate that Form 1023-EZ allows the IRS to determine, with an acceptable level of accuracy, whether applicants should be recognized as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations.¹⁸

By December of 2014, 54 percent of all applications for exempt status as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization were submitted on Form 1023-EZ; by July 1, 2015, one year after Form 1023-EZ was introduced, the frequency was 58 percent.¹⁹ In the interim, in view of her misgivings about the adequacy of the new form, the National Taxpayer Advocate announced that TAS would independently review a random sample of approved Form 1023-EZ filers.²⁰

The Introduction of Form 1023-EZ Did Not Affect the Legal Requirements for Exempt Status As an IRC § 501(c)(3) Organization

The rules for obtaining recognition of exempt status did not change with the introduction of Form 1023-EZ. An IRC § 501(c)(3) organization, which is generally exempt from income taxation and may receive tax deductible contributions, is one that is “organized and operated exclusively” for one or more of the following eight purposes:²¹

- Religious;
- Charitable;
- Scientific;
- Testing for public safety;
- Literary;
- Educational;
- To foster national or international amateur sports competition (but only if no part of its activities involve the provision of athletic facilities or equipment); or
- For the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.²²

Whether an organization applies using Form 1023 or Form 1023-EZ, if it fails either the organizational test or the operational test, discussed below, it is not an organization described in IRC § 501(c)(3).²³ It is subject to taxation on its income.

IRC § 501(c)(3) Organizations Must Satisfy an Organizational Test

To meet the “organizational test,” an organization, which may be a corporation, an unincorporated association, or a trust, must have “articles of organization” that:

- Limit the organization’s purposes to one or more exempt purposes;
- Do not expressly empower the organization to engage, other than as an insubstantial part of its activities, in activities which themselves are not in furtherance of one or more exempt purposes; and
- Permanently dedicate the organization’s assets to IRC § 501(c)(3) purposes on dissolution.²⁴

Thus, the organization’s articles must generally contain an acceptable purpose clause and a sufficient dissolution clause. In some states, a nonprofit corporation’s articles need not include a specific dissolution provision because by operation of state law the organization’s assets would be distributed upon dissolution 21 Organizations exempt from tax under IRC § 501(c)(3) are generally not required to pay tax on their related income, and may receive tax deductible contributions. See IRC §§ 501 and 170(c)(2). An organization determined to not have been tax exempt would be treated as a taxable entity required to report and pay tax on income (whether related to the erstwhile exempt purpose or not).

22 See IRC §§ 501 and 170(c)(2). Unrelated business income may be subject to tax. See IRC § 511 et seq. Further, in order to qualify as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization, no part of the organization’s net earnings can inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual (IRC § 501(c)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(2)); the organization cannot devote more than an insubstantial part of its activities to attempting to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation (IRC § 501(c)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(3)(i)); and the organization cannot participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office (IRC § 501(c)(3)).

23 Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(a)(1).

24 Treas. Reg. §§ 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(1)(i)(a), (b); 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(4). “Articles of organization” includes “the trust instrument, the corporate charter, the articles of association, or any other written instrument by which an organization is created.” Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(2).

for one or more exempt purposes, or to the federal government, or to a state or local government, for a public purpose.²⁵ The nine states with such laws, sometimes referred to as cy pres states, are Arkansas, California, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma, and Texas.²⁶ In general, a determination as to whether a corporation satisfies the organizational test can be made after reviewing its articles of incorporation.

This study is limited to Form 1023-EZ filers that were corporations (we did not consider applications submitted by unincorporated associations or trusts).²⁷ The first part of the data collection instrument, discussed below, focuses on whether the corporation met the organizational test.

IRC § 501(c)(3) Organizations Must Satisfy an Operational Test

An organization meets the “operational test” if:

- It engages primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of the eight exempt purposes specified in IRC § 501(c)(3);²⁸
- No more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose;²⁹ and
- It is operated to further public rather than private interests.³⁰

Because the terms “exclusively,” “primarily” and “insubstantial” are undefined in IRC § 501(c)(3) and the regulations, whether an organization meets the operational test may depend on the facts and circumstances.³¹ This research project did not involve reviewing the approved Form 1023-EZ, contacting any organization, or otherwise attempting to develop a conclusion about whether an organization met the operational test. However, the second part of the data collection instrument, discussed below, allowed us to gather some descriptive information that could be relevant to such a determination.

25 See Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(4).

26 Rev. Proc. 82-2, 1982-1 C.B. 367, Tex. Bus. Orgs. Code Ann. § 22.304(a)(2) (2012). Cy pres is “[t]he equitable doctrine under which a court reforms a written instrument with a gift to charity as closely to the donor’s intention as possible, so that the gift does not fail.” BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY (9th ed. 2009). State law or court action of the type described in Rev. Proc. 82-2 satisfies the requirement for a dissolution provision where there is no provision in the creating document. However, if the creating document contains a dissolution provision that is defective, state law or court action would not cure the defect. See Elizabeth Ardoin, 2004 EO CPE Text Organizational Test – IRC 501(c)(3) 12, Q.11, available at <https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-tege/eotopicd04.pdf>.

27 Most Form 1023-EZ applicants are corporations. For example, of the 29,067 approved Form 1023-EZ applications from July 1, 2014–Mar. 27, 2015, 26,076 of the applicants were corporations, 2,752 were unincorporated associations other than a trust, and 239 were trusts. TE/GE response to TAS information request (June 11, 2015).

28 See Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1), providing that “[a]n organization will be regarded as operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes only if it engages primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of such exempt purposes specified in section 501(c)(3).”

29 See Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1), providing that “[a]n organization will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose.”

30 Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii).

31 An exception is IRC § 501(h), an elective “safe harbor” that allows for a determination, based solely on the electing IRC § 501(c)(3) organization’s expenditures, of whether its lobbying activities are within permissible limits.

RESEARCH QUESTIONS

Our study examines a representative sample of corporations:

- That were organized in states with a free, publicly accessible electronic database of legible copies of corporations' articles of incorporation;³² and
- Whose Forms 1023-EZ were approved between July 1, 2014 and March 27, 2015.

For the 408 organizations in the representative sample, we inquired into three areas:

1. Whether the Organization Satisfied the Organizational Test
 - Whether its articles of incorporation contained an acceptable purpose clause;
 - Whether its articles contained an adequate dissolution clause;³³ and
 - How long it takes to retrieve and review articles of incorporation from state websites.
2. Whether the Organization was Eligible to Apply for Exempt Status Using Form 1023-EZ
 - The number ineligible because their application for retroactive reinstatement was apparently submitted more than 15 months after the organization's exempt status was automatically revoked; and
 - The number ineligible for other reasons.³⁴
3. Whether Information on the Organization's Website, if Any, Provided Transparency
 - The number of organizations that had websites; and
 - The number of websites that identified directors or identified a contact person.

METHODOLOGY

TE/GE provided TAS Research a data file with the names, Employer Identification Numbers (EINs), state of incorporation, ruling date, and addresses of all corporations whose Form 1023-EZ applications were approved from July 1, 2014, when Form 1023-EZ was introduced, through March 27, 2015.³⁵ There were 26,064 separate organizations in the data file.³⁶ Of these organizations, 11,000 (about 40 percent), were incorporated in states in which the Secretary of State maintains a website that permitted TAS to view legible copies of corporations' articles of incorporation at no charge (20 states).³⁷ The IRS has sought 32 There are 20 such states, enumerated below.

33 As noted above, not all states require a dissolution clause, but even in those states a defective dissolution clause is not cured by the operation of the cy pres doctrine. Thus, all dissolution clauses required review.

34 Organizations with total assets in excess of $250,000 and those expecting annual gross receipts to exceed $50,000 are not eligible to use Form 1023-EZ. Because we did not review the applications themselves, we did not determine whether any such organizations were included in our sample. However, as discussed below, we were able to ascertain whether organizations in our sample ran afoul of other eligibility requirements. For example, organizations formed as limited liability companies, churches, schools, colleges, and universities, hospitals, credit counselling organizations, and medical research organizations, among others, are all ineligible to use Form 1023-EZ. See Rev. Proc. 2014-40, § 2.01, 2014-30 I.R.B. 229.

35 Because the TE/GE database used to process the applications did not initially reflect the state of incorporation, there were 2,792 organizations in the data file for which the state of incorporation was not shown. TE/GE response to TAS information request (May 26, 2015). TAS adjusted the data collection instrument (DCI) to address the possibility that an organization's mailing address differed from its state of incorporation. See DCI Question 8, infra.

36 Twelve duplicate organizations were found and we kept the duplicate with the latest date.

37 These states are: Alaska, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, and Texas. Of these, Massachusetts, Missouri, Ohio, and Texas are cy pres states.

access to these records for states that do not currently make them available to the public.³⁸ Out of these 11,000 organizations, TAS Research identified a representative, random sample of 420 organizations for further analysis. Articles of incorporation for 11 organizations could not be located on the official site for the state in which, according to TE/GE, the organization was formed.³⁹ Further, one organization's articles of incorporation were viewable on the appropriate state website, but portions were not legible. We excluded these twelve organizations from our sample, resulting in a sample size of 408. Our findings for the study population are statistically valid at the 95 percent confidence level with a margin of error no greater than +/-5 percent, which allows study findings to be projected to the population of 11,000 organizations from states in our study. Some findings are for smaller portions of the sample and will have a larger margin of error. The TAS team, led by a Technical Liaison with more than 15 years of experience as an EO determinations specialist, included a second Technical Liaison, two Revenue Agent Technical Advisors (RATAs), a Research Analyst, a Supervisory Research Analyst, and a Senior Attorney Advisor.⁴⁰

DATA COLLECTION

The team lead, using training material developed by TE/GE, trained the RATAs on the legal requirements for exempt status as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization.⁴¹ The project team then developed a DCI, which appears in Appendix A, to capture information about each organization. The Technical Liaisons and RATAs completed the DCI for each organization in the sample. Some DCI questions required a review of the organization's publicly available articles of incorporation. Other DCI questions required a review of the IRS's publicly accessible Select Check database.⁴² Still other DCI questions required a review of the organization's website (if any). To minimize bias, case reviewers were thoroughly and consistently briefed on the purpose of the data collection and provided instructions on proper completion of the DCI. The project lead reviewed ten completed DCIs from each team member for accuracy, and the team discussed ten additional DCIs as a group. In addition, the DCI includes the question "is your review complete?" and one possible response is "needs additional review." If that option was selected, the team lead reviewed the DCI for that organization. TAS Research collected additional data from return

- 38 In its third quarter, BPR, TE/GE reported that "24 states publicly post articles of incorporation, 22 states do not have electronic versions publicly available, and the remaining four states charge fees or have a lengthy application process to get access to the articles." TE/GE is exploring the possibility of gaining access to any Secretary of State offices that have internal systems with electronic articles of incorporation, or to such electronic versions maintained by state Attorneys General. TE/GE Third Qtr BPR 2015 at 5 (Oct. 2015). No mention of these efforts appears in TE/GE's Fourth Qtr BPR.
- 39 If an organization with the name shown in the data file TE/GE provided did not appear on the state database for the state shown in the TE/GE data file for that organization, we attempted to determine whether the organization appeared on that state database under a name that, due to a typographical error, differed from the name in the TE/GE data file. If we were able to confirm that it was the same organization (e.g., by comparing the organization's EIN in the TE/GE data file with an EIN shown on the state database), we included the organization in the sample.

The organizations in the sample are geographically distributed among states in the United States as shown by Figure 1.2.

Geographical Distribution of Organizations in the Sample

The exempt status of 69 (16 percent) of organizations in the sample had been automatically revoked, from which we inferred that they filed Form 1023-EZ seeking reinstatement of their exempt status.

Thirty-Seven Percent of Organizations Failed the Organizational Test Because Their Articles Lacked an Adequate Purpose Clause, Dissolution Clause, or Both

As described above, in order to qualify for exempt status as an IRC § 501(c)(3) organization, the articles of incorporation for all the organizations in our sample are required to contain an acceptable purpose clause. Of the 408 organizations in the sample, 284 (70 percent) organizations meet this requirement and 124 (30 percent) do not.

In addition, the articles of incorporation must contain an adequate dissolution clause, unless, under the doctrine of cy pres, a dissolution clause is not required.⁴³ Out of the 408 organizations in the sample there are 313 whose assets upon dissolution would be distributed as the law requires, a rate of 77 percent. The articles of 95 organizations, or 23 percent, do not meet this requirement. Figures 1.3 and 1.4 show the number of organizations in the sample that meet the organizational test and those that do not, further characterized by whether the organization is in a cy pres state. For those organizations that do not meet the organizational test, the reason for not meeting the test (inadequate purpose clause, inadequate dissolution clause, or both) is also shown.

43 Of the 408 organizations in the sample, 138 organizations are in cy pres states and 270 organizations are not. Of the 138 organizations in cy pres states, six contained a dissolution clause (although no clause is required) and the clause was inadequate. Because, as noted above, state law or court action would not cure a defective dissolution provision contained in articles of incorporation, we counted these six organizations among those that did not have an adequate dissolution clause. Sixty-eight of the organizations in cy pres states were organized in Texas, 30 in Ohio, 23 in Massachusetts, and 17 in Missouri.

Overall, as Figure 1.5 shows, of 408 organizations in the sample, 259 (63 percent) meet the organizational test and 149 (37 percent) do not.

The overall rate of compliance for organizations in cy pres states and non cy pres states is similar (67 percent compared to 61 percent). Unsurprisingly, for organizations in cy pres states, the failure to meet the organizational test was usually (in 42 out of 45 such cases) due to the lack of an adequate purpose clause. For organizations in non cy pres states that did not meet the organizational test, however, formulating an adequate purpose clause was also an obstacle. For these organizations, the lack of a dissolution clause was not the predominant reason for the noncompliance. Rather, these organizations usually (in 67 out of 104 such cases) lacked both an adequate purpose clause and an adequate dissolution clause. Thus, cy pres doctrines assist organizations to meet the requirements for exempt status, but the difficulty of crafting an acceptable purpose clause appears to result in comparable compliance levels, for purposes of the organizational test, of organizations in cy pres states and those in non cy pres states.

For the 259 organizations in the sample that meet the organizational test, we were usually able to identify more than one exempt purpose; only 60 appear to have a single exempt purpose.⁴⁴ Common combinations of purposes are religious, charitable, scientific, and educational (72 organizations) and charitable and educational (51 organizations).

It Takes Only a Few Minutes to Review Articles of Incorporation, and Inadequacies Appear to Be Easily Correctable

It took the reviewers about three minutes on average to review an organization's articles and determine whether there were acceptable purpose and dissolution clauses.⁴⁵ The longest it took to search for and review articles was 15 minutes (in four cases). In over 90 percent of the cases, it took five minutes or less.

The articles of incorporation for the organizations in our sample contain a wide variety in wording or word choice. Each organization's articles required attentive review because, as IRS training materials note, "[t]he difference between the right word and the almost right word is the difference between lightning and the lightning bug."⁴⁶ Articles that are "almost right" cannot, as a matter of law, satisfy the requirements for IRC § 501(c)(3) status. For example, an organization's purpose clause might consist of a mission statement suggesting an exempt purpose, but no limitation imposing exclusivity with respect to that exempt purpose or purposes as required by IRC § 501(c)(3).⁴⁷ Similarly, an organization's articles might provide that its assets on dissolution will be distributed to a named organization that is described in IRC § 501(c)(3), but make no provision ensuring that the assets will be dedicated to a charitable purpose in the event the named organization is unwilling to accept the assets, is no longer described in IRC § 501(c)(3), or is no longer in existence.⁴⁸ In either situation, the organization does not meet the requirements of IRC § 501(c)(3). However, if the organization were made aware of the deficiency and would be willing to adjust its articles (and its operations, if necessary), cases such as these could be easily 44 Of these 60 organizations, 39 have only a charitable purpose, 12 have only an educational purpose, four have prevention of cruelty to children or animals as the only purpose, two have only the purpose of fostering amateur sports competition, and three have only a religious purpose. None of the organizations that meet the organizational test have only scientific, literary, or testing for public safety purposes.

45 The average number of minutes was 2.7.

47 The instructions to Form 1023 on page 7 provide this example of an acceptable dissolution clause: "The organization is organized exclusively for charitable, religious, educational, and scientific purposes, under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding section of any future federal tax code."

48 The instructions to Form 1023 on page 7 provide this example of an acceptable purpose clause: "Upon the dissolution of this organization, assets shall be distributed for one or more exempt purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding section of any future federal tax code, or shall be distributed to the federal government, or to a state or local government, for a public purpose."

resolved during the application process and before granting IRC § 501(c)(3) status. TE/GE's practice, when it reviews articles of incorporation as part of its pre-determination review of a random sample of Form 1023-EZ applicants, is to advise organizations of any deficiencies in their organizing documents.⁴⁹ However, TE/GE does not actually require affected organizations to demonstrate they adjusted their articles, but only to attest they have done so. The applicable paragraph from the letter TE/GE uses for this purpose appears as Appendix D.

Some Organizations in the Sample Were Not Eligible to Use Form 1023-EZ

As described above, eligibility to file Form 1023-EZ is restricted to organizations that meet certain characteristics in terms of size and organizational attributes. Specifically, organizations responding affirmatively to any of the questions on the Eligibility Worksheet are not eligible to apply using Form 1023-EZ. Organizations that do not meet these eligibility requirements may qualify as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations, but they must apply for recognition using a full Form 1023. In the representative sample of 408 organizations, the articles of incorporation of 18, or four percent, showed they were not eligible to apply using Form 1023-EZ.⁵⁰

Information on Organizations' Websites May Provide Additional Information, But Only About 60 Percent of the Organizations Had Websites, Including Facebook

Organizations eligible to apply for recognition as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations using Form 1023-EZ may generally meet their annual reporting requirements by submitting Form 990-N, or e-Postcard, which contains eight pieces of information:

- the organization's EIN;
- the tax year;
- the organization's legal name and mailing address;
- any other names the organization uses;
- the name and address of a principal officer;
- the website address if the organization has one;
- confirmation that the organization's annual gross receipts are $50,000 or less: and, if applicable,
- a statement that the organization has terminated or is terminating (going out of business).

Because these eight pieces of information convey very little about the organization, the best public source of information may be the organization's website. There is no requirement that an exempt organization maintain a website, and out of the 408 organizations in the sample, fewer than half (191 organizations, or 47 percent) had websites other than Facebook.⁵¹

49 For a description of TE/GE's predetermination review of a representative sample of Form 1023-EZ applicants, see Most Serious Problem: Form 1023-EZ: Recognition as a Tax-Exempt Organization is Now Virtually Automatic for Most Applicants, Which Invites Noncompliance, Diverts Tax Dollars and Taxpayer Donations, and Harms Organizations Later Determined to be Taxable, supra.

50 Nine organizations are schools, colleges, or universities or supporting organizations, four are churches, two are organized as limited liability companies (LLCs), two are credit counseling organizations, and one is a medical research organization. In addition, one organization appears to have filed Form 1023-EZ to obtain retroactive reinstatement of its exempt status, even though it filed Form 1023-EZ more than 15 months after its automatic revocation. See Form 1023-EZ Instructions at 10.

51 Of the 408 organizations in the sample, 217 did not have websites; in seven cases we could not determine whether there was a website. Of the 217 organizations in the sample that did not have websites, 54 had Facebook pages. Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) Exhibit 10.8.27-1 (Sept. 29, 2014) prohibits employees from "using social media (e.g., Google Groups, Wikipedia, MySpace, Facebook, YouTube, Second Life, Flickr, Twitter) in an official capacity, or during their duty time, and such use shall be separate from their job."

As noted above, of the 408 organizations in the sample, 124 either had an inadequate purpose clause or no clause at all in their articles of incorporation. Of these 124 organizations, 61 had websites we could access to obtain additional information.⁵² From viewing those 61 websites, we were able to ascertain the organization's purpose in 42 cases, but the purpose of the remaining 19 remains obscure. Only 11 of the 61 websites identified a contact person (with or without a separate email address or phone number for that person) and only 19 out of the 61 websites identified the organization's directors.

The website of one organization whose articles of incorporation have acceptable purpose and dissolution clauses (i.e., the organization met the organizational test) raises concern about whether the organization serves a private, as opposed to public, interest. The website notes:

[T]he [X, a named individual] Memorial Fund Was created, not only to carry out [X]'s legacy, but to also establish a college fund for his two children [Y and Z]. [X] was a beloved stand-up comedian and country music artist known by many for his original songs and comedy performances. By donating to this fund you are not only aiding in keeping [X]'s legacy alive, but also aiding in the future and education of a child. The [X] Memorial Fund is a voice for his fans in this time of mourning. Please take a moment to donate and reflect on the life of the beloved [X].

This description raises serious doubts about whether the organization intends to serve a public, as opposed to a private, interest. The website of a different organization, which also met the organizational test, reveals that it is actually a for-profit business.⁵³ Eight organizations in our sample filed Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return for at least one tax period prior to obtaining recognition of exempt status, which raises the question of whether the organizations merely continued to operate a for-profit entity in the guise of an exempt organization.

FOLLOW-UP STEPS IN LIGHT OF STUDY FINDINGS

As discussed above, our study showed that a significant number of Form 1023-EZ applicants were recognized as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations despite failing to meet the legal requirements for such status. Those that intended to organize and operate exclusively for an exempt purpose but simply drafted their articles of incorporation inartfully did not receive from the IRS the minimal amount of service needed to identify the deficiency and notify the organization of the need to correct it. Organizations that misrepresented their qualifications as exempt organizations, intentionally or not, were aided by the IRS in misleading the public. Taxpayers' right to quality service and their right to be informed were thereby undermined.⁵⁴ To the extent organizations received amounts that should have been treated as taxable receipts they were improperly subsidized by other taxpayers. To the extent organizations not qualified as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations received contributions deducted by the donor, tax dollars were inappropriately diverted. In any case, the IRS missed a valuable opportunity to avert noncompliance as the organizations commenced or continued their operations. In order to allow the IRS to work with organizations in our sample identified as not meeting the requirements of exempt status as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations, we provided their EINs to TE/GE. We recommended that TE/GE advise the organizations of the deficiencies in their articles and require the organizations to demonstrate (not simply attest) that they amended their articles 52 Sixty-two of the 124 organizations without an adequate purpose clause in their articles of incorporation also did not have websites. Of the 62 that did not have websites, 16 had Facebook pages.

53 Two other organizations' websites raise concerns that the organization serves a private benefit. They did not satisfy the organizational test because their articles lack an acceptable purpose clause.

54 See Taxpayer Bill of Rights, available at www.TaxpayerAdvocate.irs.gov/taxpayer-rights.

to comply with the requirements for qualification as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations. We will ask TE/GE which organizations it contacted, and TAS will determine how many amended their articles of incorporation to comport with the requirements for exempt status as IRC § 501(c)(3) organizations.

CONCLUSION

A significant number of organizations recognized as exempt under IRC § 501(c)(3) do not meet the legal requirements for that status. It takes only a few minutes to ascertain whether an organization's articles of incorporation contain adequate purpose and dissolution clauses, and some inadequacies in the articles appear to be easily correctable. Moreover, because Form 1023-EZ does not require narrative responses or substantiating documents and Form 990-N provides only minimal information, together with the probability that a Form 1023-EZ applicant does not maintain a website, there is a disturbing lack of information about organizations whose Form 1023-EZ was approved.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The National Taxpayer Advocate recommends that the IRS adjust Form 1023-EZ to require organizations to submit their organizing documents, unless they are available online at no cost, and require a narrative statement of the organization's activities and its financial information. The IRS should make a determination only after reviewing these materials, and to the extent a deficiency can be corrected by amending the organizing document, the IRS should require the applicant to submit an amendment that corrects the deficiency and has been approved by the state. The IRS should also continue its efforts to gain electronic access to articles of incorporation of corporations organized in states that do not presently make these records publicly available online.

16. Are you requesting classification as a supporting organization under section 509(a)(3)?	A supporting organization (as defined in section 509(a)(3)) differs from the other types of public charities described in section 509. Instead of describing an organization that conducts a particular kind of activity or that receives financial support from the general public, section 509(a)(3) describes organizations that have established certain relationships in support of public charities described in section 509(a)(1) or 509(a)(2). Thus, an organization can qualify as a supporting organization (and not be classified as a private foundation) even though it may be funded by a single donor, family, or corporation. Private operating foundations are subject to more favorable rules than other private foundations in terms of charitable contribution deductions and attracting grants from private foundations. However, to be classified as a private operating foundation, an organization must meet certain tests.
